

Project Open

'Lincoln Towers University' Open to all residents

VERY HARD POEMS

Two Sessions with Susan Fox

Why bother with hard poems when there are so many easy songs to express our feelings?

Because any good poem does more than just express common experience. Poems combine experiences in startling and memorable ways. They penetrate to levels of feeling and thought we usually skim across. They engage us with their authors' minds in ways that bridge time and make the unfamiliar real.

And hard poems, really good hard poems, remap our thought processes and make us rethink our lives.

This two-part class will consider two classic English poems that require us to take on major issues in unexpected ways. We will concentrate not just on what the poems say, but on how they say it and why they say it the way they do. I look forward to delving into these masterpieces with you.

Tuesday Afternoons October 17 and 24 at 4pm30 E at 160 West End

$10 Registration Fee Class limited Register with Professor Fox at bordeliere@wanadoo.fr or Registrar Eleanora Von Dehsen212-875-0654

